

'Yes we can!'

“IF there is anyone out there who still doubts that America is a place where all things are possible; who still wonders if the dream of our founders is alive in our time; who still questions the power of our democracy, tonight is your answer.” Acceptance speech of Barack Obama, the US president-elect.

Once again California proved that it is one of the bluest spots on the US map. 61 percent of the Californian voters decided to choose Barack Obama as their next president to deal with two wars, tough economic situation, and environmental issues. Many of them were young people and first-time voters. They voted for change. And 55 of California's electoral votes made sure that Obama wins.

It is interesting to note that on the presidential Election Day the District of Columbia turned to be the bluest out of all US states—93 percent of the voters were for Barack Obama. People of the state where the White House is actually located feel that there must be change in its occupancy.

While the numbers slowly but surely conveyed the goodwill of the American people to seek change and restore hope, some of us here in the USA were not able to vote because they are not US citizens yet. But this presidential election has impact on every single person living here as a citizen, a permanent resident, or a newcomer to start the Immigration process.

While it is early to say how the President-elect will deal with Immigration issues, what reforms the Congress will be passing, everybody is full of hope not only because of Obama's promise to deal with Immigration issues, but because Obama has to fix the economy. The economy being down—many petitioning companies have fired their foreign beneficiaries.

But believing that “America is a place where all things are possible”—YOU as a laid-off beneficiary or a newcomer should be proactive and seek professional help without losing precious time. That is the thing about Immigration—there are always dead-lines. You do not know which ones you are missing unless a professional tells you. If you are laid-off with a pending petition on your hands—maybe some other company can legally overtake it. If you are a specialist seeking first sponsorship—maybe there is a company which needs such a specialist. We, CSI Professionals, Inc. can help you find such company.

Yes, change has come to America. But first thing—YOU have to make a change to follow your American dream. Maybe your son is to become the next American president!

Yes we can!

And Yes, we will not hide. CSI Professionals, Inc. is a fully blue team.

Pinkett Smith, will be honored as Woman of Style on Divine Design Gala Night. Her hard work, devotion and grace in style have made her one of the most powerful stars in Hollywood. In addition to her successful acting career, Jada recently became a first-time film director with the feature, The Human Contract. She also runs her own production company 100% Woman, produces several projects alongside her husband Will Smith, and has authored a best-selling book, Girls Hold Up This World.

Her style on the red carpet is always memorable but most notable is her lifetime commitment to philanthropy. Jada and her husband established The Will and Jada Smith Family Foundation: a community-based non-profit offering assistance to urban youth and their families. Jada also serves as a director of Mary J. Blige's Foundation, FFAWN.

This year's Man of Style, David Furnish is a Canadian born filmmaker who began in the world of advertising. David, the civil partner of Elton John, is now a successful film producer and director who gained worldwide attention for his documentary, Elton John: Tantrums & Tiaras. David was the Executive Producer of “Billy Elliot-The Musical” and has acted as Executive Producer for both the London and Sydney productions. He is beloved by so many for his style, grace and dedication to philanthropy. He currently serves on the board of the Elton John AIDS Foundation and has raised millions to help fight and prevent HIV/AIDS throughout the world.
