PAGE A8 ◀ certain look that they could make it in the Philippines but it's a lot tougher, said Kleiner.

"If you don't have talent or if you don't know the language, it's only a matter of time before people start to get sick of you," said Kleiner. "Yes, it may be easier to get in the business if you have a mestiza look but it won't last if you don't have any talent to keep the people entertained."

Kleiner added that if breaking into Philippine show business is truly that person's passion, then go for it.

"Life is too short to have a dream and not give yourself a shot," said Kleiner. "To live your life knowing that there is something that you really want to do but you didn't believe in yourself enough to try, you'll carry that [thought] with you the rest of your life... believe in yourself and put in the effort."

Kleiner went back to the Philippines last week. She said that she'd continue to work hard to make her dreams into a reality. ■
