obtaining 29 percent of 1,200 respondents.

He, however, stressed that it is "unethical" to dispute the Social Weather Stations (SWS) survey, "even if the results are somewhat hard to believe," because it is "an established organization."

He said the results of polls "must be ranged against the realities on the ground," as the Center does in its polls.

Media operations
"To be blunt about it, the presidential campaign has taken off even before the filing of the certificates of candidacies and we'll be seeing more of these special media operations in the days to come," Malay said.

He said it was "understandable" that Aquino, being the "last to board the presidential campaign train, and his strategists will have to do everything to turn him into a viable and winnable candidate and this is just one of those.

"(And) they pulled the rug on other presidential candidates who were caught napping," Malay said.

He said Aquino has "succeeded in grabbing the advantage from the other candidates and he enjoys the support of a big broadcasting network and a national broadsheet."

"This only proves that media giants can dictate where the fortunes of this country will go. Whether this is good for the country or not is for
