ON LIFE, PRAYERS AND POETRY

3. March 30, 1986

There was this time when I didn't want to move on. I thought I'm done with college and that's it. Why do I need to endlessly study more, learning more skills and knowledge? Anyway, at the end, God measures us up on how much we loved not on how much we know.

Then, I felt His answer. Yes, we have to improve ourselves so we can serve others better. We can give more love if we work on ourselves and become better use to others...

Earthly Gains

What you are and what you have,
Are looked up to, but not till death;
For when all men face the final cue,
Rich and poor will show a barren hue.

So to all the gain this world could bring,
Look to it as a minor thing;
Yet go on and don't you miss,
Improve yourself for God to please!

Whiter teeth gives impression of better health

CREATIVE SMILES

DR. NELLY LYN MONTILLA

BEING perceived as healthier and more attractive may be as simple as flashing a healthy white smile, according to a study conducted by Proctor & Gamble.

The Crest Extra Whitening Smile study asked Americans to rate two photos of the same people before and after their teeth had been digitally manipulated to be whiter. Each participant looked at 20 pairs of photos. Respondents were not informed of the manipulation process, and the tooth color changes were slight. The results showed an overwhelming majority (90 percent) of study respondents viewed the people with whiter teeth as healthier and more attractive, than photos of the same people with duller, less white teeth, regardless of age, sex, or ethnic background. Conducted in conjunction with Custom Research Inc., and research and psychology experts, the study surveyed 200 male and female respondents of various ages and ethnic backgrounds in eight cities in the United States.

This study demonstrates what dentists have known all along – “that the whiteness of your teeth affects how other people see you.” “Not only are whiter teeth more appealing, but others believe you to be healthier”. An extra benefit is that people with white teeth feel better about themselves.” You can change the color of your teeth with up to 10 shades in a one hour tooth whitening dental office treatment. A New you is just a call away.
