if it's tough," relates Suzi.

The father's role being that crucial, Suzi would only be too glad if dads could take time out to watch Mommy Diary themselves.

"They will appreciate their wives more," Suzi promises.

Today's pilot episode will feature mom-to-be Joyce Jimenez, who will leave soon for the US to give birth there. Other guests are Giselle Sanchez (due to give birth to her second child by Lamaze next month) and Danica Sotto-Pingris.

Joyce will get tips on what to prepare before she goes to the hospital for her date with the stork. Giselle will talk about sleep deprivation for moms who just gave birth. Both of them, and Suzi as well, will get a lot of help from the show's sponsor, Johnson's Baby.

No one said motherhood will be easy. But with a little help from fellow moms like Suzi and her guests every week, mothers out there can let their hair down. ■

Your fave celebrities' 'mommy memories'

CAN'T help getting emotional every Mother's Day. It intensifies my longing to see my SuperwoMom whom I miss with every breath I take.

But the love and lessons she left me with will tide me over until I'm back in her warm embrace. Being my mother's daughter will always be my best credential and being my children's mother is what I live for.

I asked the stars to share their own "mommy memories." Here's to all mothers whose work is never done and whose love never runs out.

Ogie Alcasid

Karylle: "I cherish the time when my mom and I did our first number together in ASAP. During the commercial break while we were both onstage, I kept rehearsing my spiel, 'Welcome back to ASAP,' since I just transferred from GMA. My mom kept teasing me na 'wag daw ako magkamali so the audience kept laughing. When we went on air, they cheered loudly when I delivered my spiel correctly."

Ogie Alcasid: "I'll never forget one springtime in the '80s when my mom and I toured the countryside of Japan, and the spiritual retreat we had during my parents' golden wedding anniversary."

Miriam Quiambao: "I agreed to meet my mom at her office for lunch but was unable to confirm. When I arrived, I was told she had a meeting so I thought she had forgotten. It turned out she left her phone at home. She fed me her baon. It was one of our best bonding moments."

Diether Ocampo: "I'm always touched when my mom cooks for me and fights those who instigate me."

Tintin Bersola-Babao: "What stands out in my memory are our travels together, her kilometric text messages which are the highlight of my day and her one of a kind laughter."

Christian Bautista: "When my mom forgave me after I got caught cheating in my Grade 1 exams. I value the way she reminds me not to forget God and the family despite my busy schedule."
