Cory Aquino in serious condition

PAGE A1 ◀
 "You took the hand of our dear sister Cory, as she struggled through every trial, as she confronted every challenge, and embraced every cross of her life. Take her hand now and have mercy on her and upon all poor souls who are in agony and make Your will known to them," said Sanchez, who has asked the former President to be a sponsor at her wedding to Sen. Mar Roxas.
 Among those present at the Mass were former members of the Aquino Cabinet led by former Senate President Franklin Drilon and wife Mila, former Finance Secretary Ramon del Rosario Jr., Popoy Juico and his wife Margie, who served as Aquino's appointments secretary, Manila Mayor Fred Lim, and anti-Arroyo activists Dinky Soliman and Leah Navarro of the Black and White Movement.
 In Negros Occidental, Bacolod Bishop Vicente Navarra also called on the faithful to pray for Aquino's well-being.
 Kabankalan Bishop Patricio Buzon did the same in extolling

Aquino's legacy to the nation, which was to end the Marcos dictatorship in February 1986 and restore freedom and democracy to the nation.
'We need her'
 In a statement issued by his office, Aquino's only son, Sen. Benigno "Noynoy" Aquino III, said he "sincerely thanks all those who attended the novena Mass and those who continue to pray for his mother's healing."
 Drilon said he last spoke with Noynoy Aquino last week and that the latter "did not sound very optimistic because of his mother's appetite problem."
 "We have no other recourse but to pray, pray very hard, for her," Drilon said in a phone interview. "It's very difficult to lose Cory at this time when we need her most."
 Aquino, known as the icon of Filipino people power, remained active in social and political causes even after stepping down from office.
 In July 2005, she added her voice to the growing call for President Macapagal-Arroyo's resignation over allegations of vote-rigging and corruption, and later joined protest rallies against the administration.
 Senators Roxas and Manuel Villar Jr., both presidential aspirants, called on the people to pray for Aquino.
 "I have heard the news that President Aquino is undergoing a difficult time in her illness," Roxas said, adding that he joined the people in praying for her quick recovery.
 "President Cory is one of the greatest leaders I respect and emulate," he said, adding: "Mrs. President, please fight on. We need you."
 Villar said the former President was entering "a critical period in the battle against cancer."
 "We will forever be indebted to President Cory for her significant contribution to the restoration of democracy in the country. In this time when there are serious threats to our democracy, she remains the icon that our people turn to for hope," Villar said in a statement.
 "Our prayers are also with the members of her family. May their unshakeable faith in God strengthen them in this difficult time," he said. ■
